Background

Water heating systems represent an important part of the Standards' energy budgets. As other components of the building such as envelope and mechanical systems become more efficient, water heating systems remain an area where significant energy savings can be achieved.

At this workshop, staff will discuss the Building Energy Efficiency Standards rulemaking process. Guest speakers will present examples of current and advanced water heating system designs in single family, multi-family, and nonresidential buildings in California. The goal of this workshop is to identify the current issues and potential solutions; and identify and prioritize the next steps to include additional water heating energy efficiency measures in future updates of the Standards.
